Questions 1–6

Read the text. Fill in each gap with ONE word. You must use a word which is somewhere in the rest of the text.

SPIES

Although most countries employ spies, few will ever admit that they do. Therefore, it is only on the rare occasion of a Q1 _____ being caught by an enemy Q2_____ that the public becomes aware of what goes on behind the political scenes. Even the exchange of a captured Q3_____ spy for one of the country's own master-spies who had been caught by an enemy country is done as secretly as possible. Early one cold December morning last year, three men dressed in heavy black overcoats got out of a small blue car that had stopped on a lonely bridge in Northern Germany. They stood on the Q4 _____ for fifteen minutes waiting and watching until they saw a motorboat draw up and stop below the bridge. Seeing three Q5_____ stepped out of the boat and glanced up at the bridge, they quickly made their way down to the riverbank and the Q6_____. No words were spoken when the six men met. A short time later the boat pulled away and three men, too in black, and one in dark gray, returned to the waiting car.

List of Headings:
A) New Strategies
B) Origin of Mass Media
C) Negative Effects
D) Positive Effects
E) Media Bias
F) Confronting Reality
G) Media Censorship
H) Payments in Media

15. Paragraph I 16. Paragraph II 17. Paragraph III
18. Paragraph IV 19. Paragraph V 20. Paragraph VI

MASS MEDIA

I. Europe can boast to be the primary source of mass media. It was Johannes Gutenberg who for the first time printed a book in a printing press in 1453. Gradually, after the Second World War, radio, television, and video were introduced. The audio-visual facilities became very popular as they provided information and entertainment. The Internet has become the latest and most popular type of mass media. Here, information is generated through numerous websites and search engines. It also gives information on various topics similar to other types of mass media.

II. Mass media increase an overall awareness of the masses. They enhance the general knowledge by providing us with information from all over the world. News broadcasted through different media helps us know about the day-to-day events in the world. News and documentaries revolving around social issues increase social awareness in children and develop their concern towards society. Newspapers, apart from updating us with the latest news and new information, exchange their views over different issues that the society faces and share their thoughts on a larger scale.

III. Some experts believe that it is mass media to be blamed for eating disorders in the youths as well as for the unhealthy lifestyle that has recently emerged. The products advertised by the media and the ways they are advertised are bound to affect the practices of the youths. Children, who should invest their time in reading books, studying, playing outdoors, exercising, and engaging in social activities, today spend their evenings glued to the television. People spending hours in front of a television or surfing the Internet suffer from eye problems and obesity.

IV. Traditionally, media planning meant deciding what kind of media should be employed for the advertising campaign. They would decide where the advertisement would have the maximum impact. Today, the concept of media planning has undergone a change. Media planning now involves not only selecting a media for advertising but also deep analyses into the outreach of the ads. Also, media planners will today select unconventional streams of advertising such as mobile vehicles. Newer options are chosen depending on what the product being publicized is.

V. The Internet is a very potential source of advertising, and it is quite understandable why every company tries to promote its wares through websites. The focus here is on reaching out to the niche customers. This is what an online media planner undertakes. Media planners do not get a commission as most other people in the advertising industry do. This is because media planners do not work with volumes; they work with strategies. Their services are creative. For this reason, they receive percentage cuts from the total budgets of the advertising campaigns.

VI. There was a time when one could always rely on the various types of mass media for accurate information. But in recent years, the media have been sensationalizing lots of news or events and giving unnecessary importance to certain issues. There have been lots of situations wherein a journalist has reported a particular incident with a prejudiced opinion. The various forms of mass media are known to influence the minds of the audiences to a large extent. So, does it mean that the media control our world?

WORLD BOOK DAY – THE TEST TEEN READS

It is often suggested that teachers and librarians aren't pushing secondary school readers towards titles that challenge them enough, and so the organisers of World Book Day have announced a list which might provide some inspiration for anyone who's stuck for ideas. This list of popular books for young adults, voted for by 10,000 people across the UK, features a top 10 to 'shape and inspire' teenagers, and handle some of the challenges of adolescence. All but one of the books have already been made into films, demonstrating that when a book makes it to the big screen, it often then acquires more readers thanks to the film's success. Of course, this isn't always the case, as with George Orwell's 1984, where the rather mediocre film does not compare so favourably with the book's ability to conjure up a dark vision of life in a police state. James Bowen's A Streetcat Named Bob, published in 2012, is one of the few relatively contemporary books here. It's also certainly for me the least predictable member of the list, but its extended stay on the bestseller list earned it – and its author – a devoted following. It is the touching story of Bob, the cat who helped a homeless man called James get his life back on track. Bob sits on James's shoulder and sleeps at his feet while he plays the guitar on the street, and soon becomes the centre of attention. What makes the story particularly powerful is that it is based on author James Bowen's real life. Also on the list are J. K. Rowling's Harry Potter books. In this case it's actually the whole series rather than one particular title that makes the shortlist. Perhaps the judges struggled to agree which one book to pick. For me, the books are rather more pre-teen than the rest of the books on the list, which are aimed at a more mature readership. But Harry Potter is a special case: as Harry gets older in each successive book in the series, the stories do become more complex and darker. In a way, readers themselves grow up with Harry and his friends. Rowling asks some tough questions about standing up to authority, challenging 'normal' views and many other subjects close to teenage readers' hearts. This should get rid of the idea that the whole series is just for young kids. In actual fact, half of all Harry Potter readers are over the age of 35, but that's another story. The list goes right back to the nineteenth century with Charlotte Bronte's great romance Jane Eyre, showing that some books never grow old, though the majority are twentieth-century works such as Anne Frank's heartbreaking wartime memoir The Diary of a Young Girl, which even now I find hard to get through without shedding tears. Personally, I would have swapped J. R. R. Tolkien's The Lord of the Rings for one of the many classics that didn't make the final selection, Lord of the Flies perhaps, William Golding's nightmare vision of schoolboys stuck on an island. Of course there'll always be some choices we don't agree with, but that's what I think makes a list like this so fascinating. I've been using it with my class of 16-year-olds, and I got them to evaluate it and make other suggestions for what to include or how it could be changed. But what I hope can really make a lasting difference is if it stimulates them to try out writers on the list, perhaps ones they haven't come across before, and be introduced to new styles of writing.

For questions 21-24, choose the correct answer A, B, C, or D.

21 What criticism does the writer make in the first paragraph?

A) World Book Day has been poorly organized.
B) School librarians aren't working hard enough.
C) Teenagers are reading books that are too easy.
D) Teachers don't encourage pupils to read enough.

22 What point is made about books which are made into films?

A) The best books tend to be made into films.
B) The film of a book makes more people read the book.
C) Many people prefer to watch a film than to read the book.
D) It is useful to be able to compare the book and the film.

23 What does the writer suggest about A Street Cat Named Bob?

A) She is surprised that it is on the list.
B) The book did not sell as well as it deserved to.
C) It is the most recently published book on the list.
D) It is the only autobiography on the list.

24 How does the writer justify the presence of the Harry Potter books on the list?

A) The books' fame can help the list get more attention.
B) The later books in the series are more suitable for teenagers.
C) Teenagers should read books that they will also enjoy as adults.
D) It makes sense to have a whole series as well as individual books.

For questions 25-29, decide if the following statements agree with the information given in the text. Mark your answers on the answer sheet.

25 10,000 books are said to be popular in the UK.

A) True
B) False
C) Not Given

26 In Harry Potter books, as Harry grows up, the books become darker.

A) True
B) False
C) Not Given

27 Lord of the Flies is better than Harry Potter.

A) True
B) False
C) Not Given

28 George Orwell's book, 1984, was actually a mediocre.

A) True
B) False
C) Not Given

29 Some book adaptations can get more attention from viewers when it's adapted to a film.

A) True
B) False
C) Not Given

PART 5 Questions 30–35

Read the following text for questions 30-35.

THE NATURAL OF YAWNING

A. While fatigue, drowsiness or boredom easily bring on yawns, scientists are discovering there is more to yawning than most people think. Not much is known about why we yawn or if it serves any useful function. People have already learned that yawning can be infectious. "Contagious yawning" is the increase in likelihood that you will yawn after watching or hearing someone else yawn, but not much is known about the underlying causes, and very little research has been done on the subject. However, scientists at the University of Albany, as well as the University of Leeds and the University of London have done some exploration.

B. It is commonly believed that people yawn as a result of being sleepy or tired because they need oxygen. However, the latest research shows that a yawn can help cool the brain and help it work more effectively, which is quite different from the popular belief that yawning promotes sleep and is a sign of tiredness. Dr Andrew Gallup and his colleagues at the University of Albany in New York State said their experiments on 44 students showed that raising or lowering oxygen and carbon dioxide levels in the blood did not produce that reaction. In the study participants were shown videos of people laughing and yawning, and researchers counted how many times the volunteers responded to the "contagious yawns". The researchers found that those who breathed through the nose rather than the mouth were less likely to yawn when watching a video of other people yawning. The same effect was found among those who held a cool pack to their forehead, whereas those who held a warm pack yawned while watching the video. Since yawning occurs when brain temperature rises, sending cool blood to the brain serves to maintain the best levels of mental efficiency.

C. Yawning is universal to humans and many animals. Cats, dogs and fish yawn just like humans do, but they yawn spontaneously. Only humans and chimpanzees, our closest relatives in the animal kingdom, have shown definite contagious yawning. Though much of yawning is due to suggestibility, sometimes people do not need to actually see a person yawn to involuntarily yawn themselves: hearing someone yawning or even reading about yawning can cause the same reaction.

D. However, contagious yawning goes beyond mere suggestibility. Recent studies show that contagious yawning is also related to our predisposition toward empathy— the ability to understand and connect with others' emotional states. So empathy is important, sure, but how could it possibly be related to contagious yawning? Leave it up to psychologists at Leeds University in England to answer that. In their study, researchers selected 40 psychology students and 40 engineering students. Generally, psychology students are more likely to feel empathy for others, while engineering students are thought to be concerned with objects and science. Each student was made to wait individually in a waiting room, along with an undercover assistant who yawned 10 times in as many minutes. The students were then administered an emotional quotient test: students were shown 40 images of eyes and asked what emotion each one displayed. The results of the test support the idea that contagious yawning is linked to empathy. The psychology students—whose future profession requires them to focus on others—yawned contagiously an average of 5.5 times in the waiting room and scored 28 out of 40 on the emotional test. The engineering students—who tend to focus on things like numbers and systems—yawned an average of 1.5 times and scored 25.5 out of 40 on the subsequent test. The difference doesn't sound like much, but researchers consider it significant. Strangely enough, women, who are generally considered more emotionally attuned, didn't score any higher than men.

E. Another study, led by Atsushi Senju, a cognitive researcher at the University of London, also sought to answer that question. People with autism disorder are considered to be developmentally impaired emotionally. Autistics have trouble connecting with others and find it difficult to feel empathy. Since autistics have difficulty feeling empathy, then they shouldn't be susceptible to contagious yawning. To find out, Senju and his colleagues placed 49 kids aged 7 to 15 in a room with a television. 24 of the test subjects had been diagnosed with autism spectrum disorder, the other 25 were non-autistic kids. The test subjects were shown short clips of people yawning as well as clips of people opening their mouths but not yawning. While the kids with autism had the same lack of reaction to both kinds of clips, the non-autistic kids yawned more after the clips of people yawning.

F. There also have been studies that suggest yawning, especially psychological "contagious" yawning, may have developed as a way of keeping a group of animals alert and bonding members of a group into a more unit one. If an animal is drowsy or bored, it may not be as alert as it should to be prepared to spring into action and its yawning is practically saying, "Hey, I need some rest, you stay awake". Therefore, a contagious yawn could be an instinctual reaction to a signal from one member of the herd reminding the others to stay alert when danger comes. So the theory suggests evidence that yawning comes from the evolution of early humans to be ready to physically exert themselves at any given moment.

For questions 30-33, fill in the missing information in the numbered spaces. Write no more than ONE WORD and/or A NUMBER for each question.

Another theory shows that yawning is used for 30 _____ individuals into a tighter social unit. Alternatively, yawning can help increase alertness of group members in case 31 _____ is close. For example, yawning signals that a member of the group needs some 32 _____ and requires the others to stay aware of the surrounding situation. This theory proves that yawning is only a spontaneous behavior resulting from some part of a simple 33 _____ system in early humans.

For questions 34-35, choose the correct answer A, B, C, or D. Mark your answers on the answer sheet.

34 Which information is from Paragraph D?

A) Humans' imaginations can cause yawning.
B) Research shows that yawning is closely related to occupations.
C) An overview of the latest research in yawning.
D) Yawning is used to regulate brain temperature.

35 According to the results from the University of Albany...

A) There is no gender difference in the cause of yawning.
B) People with certain disorders are less likely to be affected by other people yawning.
C) Yawning is associated with the way people breathe.
D) People who are trained to feel empathy for others are more likely to yawn than those who are untrained.
