18. Paragraph IV 19. Paragraph V 20. Paragraph VI

RAILWAYS

I. The world's first public passenger railway was built in Great Britain in 1826 and ran between the industrial north-eastern towns of Stockton and Darlington. After 180 years' experience the British say that their trains still don't seem to run efficiently or even safely. On average, about 500 accidents with broken rail tracks happen in the country every year.

II. The British government is promising to give £33.5 billion to modernize the railways before 2010. Another £30 billion is to come from the private sector. The main target is to increase safety and speed. For example, new London-to-Scotland highspeed trains significantly reduce journey times and in 2004 a warning system was installed throughout the country.

III. Statistics show that only 12% of all journeys made in Britain are by public transport. The remaining 88% are made by car. Every year British people spend about two weeks travelling to and from work including nine days their own cars. But anyone will say this isn't a quick and easy way to travel. In fact, a journey from London to Manchester frequently takes seven hours. A cyclist could get there quicker.

IV. Every year there are about half a million traffic jams in Britain. That in nearly 10,000 a week. There are hundreds of big traffic jams every day According to the forecast, the number of jams will grow by 20 per cent over the next ten years. Nearly a quarter British people find themselves in a jam every day and 55 per cent at least once a week.

V. Nowadays many British people take their children to school by car Twenty years ago, nearly one in three primary school children made their own way to school. Now only one child in nine makes their own way. During the school year at 08:50 a.m. one car in five on the roads in any British town is taking children to school. The solution could be special school buses widely used in the USA.

VI. Many scientists hope that new technologies allowing more people to work at home may help with traffic problems. Fewer people will work from 9 to 5 and travel to and from work during the rush hour. But only 15% of people now want to spend more time working at home. The workplace is, for many people, a place to meet other people and to talk to them, so they would miss it if they worked from home.

PART 4

Questions 21–29

Read the following text for questions 21-29.

LEARNING MANDARIN

Alan McCormick, 16, lives near Sacramento, California, and has been learning Chinese for two years. "The lessons are interesting because our teacher explains to us what the characters mean and how they become what they are. Sometimes we also watch Chinese movies. The hardest thing is to write characters and listen to other people speak Mandarin". California has had close ties to China for many years. Since many immigrants came from China originally, the Chinese language has often been passed on by family members. What is interesting is that in the last few years, kids like Alan, who have no direct ties to China, are learning Mandarin a lot earlier and in greater numbers. Currently, more than 100 schools in California are offering Mandarin classes Spanish has always been the second most important language in many parts of the USA, although German and French are also old favorites That Mandarin, a much more exotic language, is able to penetrate this standing is due largely to China's increased global presence. Officially, there are more than 80,000 nationals from the People's Republic of China in America, including 27,000 students. But many more ethnic Chinese from all over the world live here too. Not surprisingly, interest in all things Chinese has grown - food, art, fengshui, acupuncture, gongfu, sports Bruce Lee and Jacky Chan have always held an audience, but now, so do Ang Lee and Zhang Yimou. Chinese film festivals, concerts, and even Chinese disco nights draw American audiences too.

But it is not easy teaching American kids Mandarin Many lower secondary schools offer the language as an after school activity much as football or music club is offered. So students come from different classes and ages and tend not to meet one another daily. There is also little support at home, unlike Chinese or Chinese-American children who usually attend Chinese schools run by Chinese organizations, and which follow a mainland or Taiwanese curriculum, "We all found that after a little while, Chinese classes [for American kids] slowed down and language learners became demotivated by the increasing number of complicated characters. They needed for a very long time to learn simple questions and answers. Students could not express what they really wanted to express. And, after learning so much, they still could not read interesting stuff," says Lu Wing, a teacher, interpreter and textbook author. The problems are compounded by the lack of staff and of appropriate teaching material. Many schools employ a native Chinese national who may or may not be qualified, and they are not paid very well.

The Association of Chinese Teachers in America has organized workshops and seminars to exchange ideas and resources. But the training and certification of teachers will continue to be difficult as there is no central authority. Student numbers need to increase significantly before the various state ministries of education will get involved seriously, and students can only be attracted if good teachers exist in the first place. Wing has written a textbook which has become the official learning material for Chinese at upper secondary levels in some states. "I separated the learning of characters from the training of dialogues. This strategy allowed the students to start character learning a bit more systematically, which in itself enhances the possibilities of character training more characters are remembered in shorter time. On the other hand, without the burden of needing to read and write every single character in a dialogue text, the students were able to get on to more interesting subjects of discussion much earlier than before

Wing stresses that young learners need to learn in a fun, interactive way and encourages the use of theatre, songs, games, films, competitions, picture shows and presentations for parents and other students. "And, of course having the possibility to travel to China is one of the most attractive aims for learning the language." When asked about his opinion, Alan responded that he would like to go to China one day, but only for vacations. He may have heard that Chinese children have a much longer school day than kids in America and that they have a lot more tests! The future of Mandarin in Californian schools seems bright Some schools in various states have incorporated Mandarin into the school curriculum and are offering it as a pre-university subject Wing's earliest group of students who started as children many years ago still has regular class reunions. Many are now studying the Chinese language at an advanced level or subjects like Asian Business Management at universities. "It is always a pleasure to be invited to their meetings, seeing their progress and success is the most wonderful gift for me as their teacher," says Wing.

For questions 21-24, choose the correct answer A, B, C, or D.

21 American students like Alan McCormick

A) are becoming more interested in attending Mandarin classes.
B) think it's easy to learn to write Chinese characters.
C) will work as translators when they leave school.
D) wish Mandarin to be a global language.

22 A large number of Chinese people in America

A) are causing Mandarin to become the most taught foreign language in school.
B) are creating more interest in the Chinese culture as a whole.
C) are more interested in learning German or French,
D) are starting to learn Spanish.

23 American kids learning Mandarin

A) are often not able to get beyond the beginner level
B) get a lot of encouragement from their parents
C) need to learn according to the curriculum of schools in China or Taiwan
D) love cartoon in Mandarin

24 Mandarin teachers in America are

A) certified by the Ministry of Education in the state where they live.
B) challenged by the lack of suitable textbooks and resources
C) generally trained teachers who came from China
D) all graduated from universities in China.

For questions 25-29, decide if the following statements agree with the information given in the text.

25 All Chinese language speakers in California learn Chinese from their relatives at home.

A) True
B) False
C) Not Given

26 Chinese is becoming one of the most popular languages in the US as the number of Chinese people and the influence of China are rising there.

A) True
B) False
C) Not Given

29 Currently, the students are learning Chinese only at elementary levels in the US.

A) True
B) False
C) Not Given

PART 5 Questions 30–35

Read the following text for questions 30-35.

HYPERPOLYGLOTS - A CASE OF BRAINPOWER OR HARD WORK?

In 1996, DICK HUDSON, a professor of linguistics at University College London posted an email to a list serve for language scientists asking if anyone knew who held the world record for the number of languages they could speak Replies listed the names of well-known polyglots, such as Giuseppe Mezzofanti, an eighteenth-century Italian cardinal.

Then, in 2003, Hudson received an unexpected reply to his email from someone who had belatedly come across his question. The writer, 'N', described how his grandfather, who was Sicilian and had never gone to school, could learn languages with such remarkable ease that by the end of his life he could speak seventy, and read and write fifty-six. N's grandfather was twenty when he moved to New York in the early 1900s. There he worked on the railways, which brought him into contact with travelers speaking many languages. When N was ten, he accompanied his grandfather on a cruise which took them to over 20 countries, from Venezuela to Hong Kong and Japan. N claimed that whatever port they visited, his grandfather knew the local language.

When Hudson read n's note, he immediately recognized the potential significance of the claims and posted them on the Internet. In his posting. he coined the term 'hyperpolyglot', which he defined as someone who speaks six languages or more.

Until recently, there was little scientific information about hyperpolyglots. Mezzofanti, for example, was supposed to have known seventy-two languages and to have spoken thirty-nine fluently, but nowadays such tales are often greeted with skepticism: In the discussion that followed Hudson's publication of N's claims, a reader disputed the Mezzofanti story, saying he found it absolutely preposterous and pointing out how long it would take to learn seventy-two languages. Assuming that each language has 20,000 words and that Mezzofanti could remember a word after encountering it once, he would have to learn one word a minute, twelve hours a day for five-and-a-half years! Professional linguists, too, are divided on this question. Philip Herdina, at the University of Innsbruck in Austria, is a skeptic. He doubts whether anyone has the capacity to speak seventy-two languages, arguing that maintaining this ability would take resources from other activities.

But if ability to learn many languages is the norm, why are so few people able to exploit it? Stephen Krashen, from the University of California, maintains that exceptional language learners simply work harder, and have a better understanding of how they learn. Krashen cites the case of Lomb Kato, an eighty-six-year-old Hungarian interpreter who could speak sixteen languages. Lomb apparently felt she had no special talent for languages; she had taken classes in Chinese and Polish, but the others she taught herself. According to Krashen, Lomb was an ordinary person with no special qualities, apart from a desire to learn languages and an effective way of achieving this aim.

Other researchers say that exceptional brains play a more significant role. In the 19805, neurolinguist Loraine Obler of the City University of New York found a talented language learner she called 'CJ', who could speak five languages. CJ had learned to read late, had an average IQ, and had always been a mediocre student. However, on the Modern Language Aptitude Test, he scored extremely high. His verbal memory was very good, he could remember lists of words for weeks, but he quickly forgot images and numbers, and had problems reading maps. All of this seemed to indicate that CJ's language talent was inborn and not related to a higher level of general intellectual ability.

For questions 30-33, fill in the missing information in the numbered spaces. Write no more than ONE WORD and/or A NUMBER for each question.

N came from a family which was partly of 30 _____ origin. The evidence of unusual linguistic ability came from two relatives. The first was N's 31 _____ , who was said to speak 32 _____ languages. N witnessed this ability during a tour of more than 33 _____

For questions 34-35, choose the correct answer A, B, C, or D. Mark your answers on the answer sheet.

34 Who thinks that successful language learning requires motivation, application, and a learning strategy?

A) Loraine Obler
B) Stephen Krashen
C) Mezzofanti
D) Philip Herdina

35 Language aptitude is probably inherited, not a facet of intelligence.

A) Loraine Obler
B) Stephen Krashen
C) Mezzofanti
D) Philip Herdina
